"Funnier than you can possibly imagine!" Spin Magazine

In detail

By age ten, Charles had seen the first Star Wars film more than 400 times and committed virtually every line to memory. His obsession eventually spawned the One-Man Star Wars Trilogy, which he tours around the U.S., using only his yoga-limber body and knack for voices. He first performed his One Man Star Wars Trilogy in Toronto, Ontario in 2001 and brought countless audiences, both large and small, to their feet with his surprisingly unique show. Word of his talent spread like wildfire and led to high profile appearances on Craig Ferguson, The Today Show, and Late Night with Conan O'Brien. His off-Broadway debut in August 2005 was a smashing success with critics raving about the incredible intensity that Charles brings to his work.
