"One of the 50 funniest acts in British comedy" The Observer

In detail

Graham Norton's rise to fame began as one of the early successes of Channel 5 when he won an award for his performance as a stand-in host of the late-night talk show. He achieved fame as a broadcaster on Channel 4 and also through his role as Father Noel Furlong in the critically acclaimed television series Father Ted. He had a small, but memorable part in the raunchy Another Gay Movie in 2006. As for his past credits, they are literally too numerous to mention here, but include a variety of other programs featuring him as host, presenter or as a guest star on such hit British comedies as Absolutely Fabulous and The Kumars at No. 42.

What he offers you

Graham Norton has displayed his obvious comedic talents globally and in the US he got away with the same naughty, suggestive jokes that made his UK shows so popular. He focuses on the people, trends, stories and aspects of celebrity culture that interest him most, featuring trademark Norton comedy monologues and celebrity chat. To sum him up, Graham is cheeky, uproarious and laugh-out-loud funny. Don't expect a quiet night in his company, just an outrageously good time. You have been warned.

How he presents

Graham Norton is a sparkling host and performer who is naturally camp and flamboyant and a cheeky, innuendo-laden joker. A complete one-off, he is amiable and enthusiastic with great energy, pace and humour.

Languages

He presents in English.
