

Adam Boulton

Former Political Editor of Sky News

"One of the leading journalists of our time"

Adam Boulton is a respected British political broadcaster and presenter, well-known for his extensive career at Sky News. With a focus on political reporting, he has provided insightful analysis and interviews on major political events and covered some of the biggest stories in politics.

TOPICS:

- American Politics
- Brexit - UK, European Union and Referendum
- Conference Chairs / Facilitators / Presenters
- Media
- Politics

LANGUAGES:

He presents in English.

PUBLICATIONS:

- 2012 Hung Together
2009 Tony's Ten Years

IN DETAIL:

Adam Boulton was at Sky News from its launch until 2021 and was the founder of the Sky News team. A pioneer of live analysis, he spent more hours on television covering breaking stories than any other British television reporter. He has covered all major developments in US politics since the Reagan years, from the USA-USSR Summits through to correctly 'calling' the election of President Joseph R Biden live on Sky News. As Sky News' political editor, Adam interviewed every British prime minister from Rishi Sunak back to Sir Alec Douglas-Home. Adam is featured as a frequent commentator in the media and has published a number of books on British politics. He currently presents a Sunday Morning Show for Times Radio, is a regular panellist on TalkTV programme: 'The News Desk with Tom Newton Dunn' and continues to be a freelance Political Contributor for Sky News GB News and Talk TV.

WHAT HE OFFERS YOU:

Adam Boulton provides fascinating insights into what really goes on behind the scenes and trenchant views on the modern political world.

HOW HE PRESENTS:

Adam is an amusing, insightful, and passionate speaker who provides audiences with numerous anecdotes from time spent with various leading figures in today's society.