IN DETAIL:

Formerly Britain's youngest-ever magazine editor, Jo has translated her skills as a journalist into marketing, PR and brand-building. She co-founded and run Green & Black's, the pioneering brand which created the UK's first-ever organic chocolate and the UK's first Fairtrade-marked product, now worth a $100 million a year. Her other business ventures included an organic bakery, a one-stop local food store, an 11-room 'boutique' wellbeing centre and a website and networking organisation for people interested in fragrance and the sense of smell. Jo continues to juggle her work as a journalist and author with being a brand ambassador for Green & Black's whilst travelling the world, sharing the rollercoaster story of how Green & Black's went from an idea in a bedroom to a global ethical brand.

WHAT SHE OFFERS YOU:

Through her presentations, Jo now takes audiences through every aspect of growing a business – from the bravery required to taking that first step, through to the practical and emotional aspects of an 'exit' strategy - and achieving that all-important (and elusive) work-life balance en-route.

HOW SHE PRESENTS:

Engaging and passionate, Jo never fails to inspire - and is always happy to network with attendees, offering more direct input to individuals.
