IN DETAIL:

During qualifying for 2011 Le Mans Legends race he made the decision to retire from competitive racing but continues to get involved in car rallies. Also well known for his love of design and the latest gadget, in 2009 the Stirling Moss brand was created, which has led to the brand being licensed. Once the decision to retire from professional motor racing was made, Sir Stirling expanded his commercial interests with the same vigour that he employed when racing, chief amongst these being his property business. One of the original jet-setters, Sir Stirling remains in huge demand around the world to this day - a true British legend. In 2004 he received the Motorsport Industry Associated award for Most Outstanding Contribution to the UK Motorsport Industry.
