"Knowledgeable, entertaining and captivating"

In detail

Adam has toured the world with his Gold selling album Good Times. He has had a mixture of high profile roles in the UK, on both stage and screen, including the lead role of "Mark Cohen" in the West End musical Rent and Judge John Deed, before moving to New Zealand for 4 years to appear in Shortland Street. Adam is Director of the Caerus Partnership aimed at increasing Mental Health support in the workplaces. Specialising in communications and fundraising, Adam is a highly sought after professional advising a variety of corporate companies, charities, fashion houses and the British High Commission.

What he offers you

As a keynote speaker, Adam offers a fascinating insight into the world of current affairs and has much to share on the strategic thinking for communication, branding and media campaigns. Adam's inspirational speeches are also drawn from his daily fight for his success despite being affected by the crippling disorder Ankylosing Spondylitis. His witty after dinner speeches are a combination of his life experiences sprinkled with stardust! Adam is an experienced and entertaining host and an engaging mediator/facilitator. With a profiled status he is a draw for any audience, but with the charm and charisma to also credit their attention.

How he presents

Adam is a witty and conversational host, who has charmed both audiences and clients alike with his particularly polite brand of entertainment. A confident, intelligent and engaging performer, he is in great demand at events all over the country... and can even sing.

Languages

He presents in English.
