

Andrew Castle

Former Tennis Player and TV Presenter

CSA Celebrity Speakers Ltd

Andrew Castle is a former British Number One tennis champion and a highly respected television presenter, including being the lead BBC commentator at Wimbledon. He writes a regular tennis column for the Metro newspaper and has interviewed everyone from Tony Blair, to the Rolling Stones to Tom Cruise.

A relaxed and confident speaker, an ideal choice as an event host

In detail

Andrew has spent 10 years at ITV's GMTV where he covered many major news stories as well as interviewing countless high-profile names. He also hosted ITV1's quiz show, Perseverance. Andrews's professional sporting career took off in 1986. He went on to compete in the 1988 Seoul and 1992 Barcelona Olympic Games and also participated in a number of Davis and European Cup competitions. To add even further to his success, he was crowned the British Number One tennis player in both singles and doubles. With great sporting success behind him, he was more than qualified to become a presenter for some of the world's top tennis tournaments.

What he offers you

With a vast knowledge of current affairs and sports, Andrew is a competent and charismatic awards host and straight talking conference facilitator. He is also an experienced auctioneer and unlike many presenters thoroughly enjoys hosting charity auctions.

How he presents

A true professional, Andrew is a relaxed speaker well loved by audiences for his down to earth and pragmatic approach.
