IN DETAIL:

Lord Digby Jones: A powerhouse in both business and government ignited the West Midlands' financial landscape in the late 1980s and early 1990s, orchestrating major buy-outs and crafting intricate mergers. His prowess led him to KPMG, where he ascended to the role of Vice-Chairman of Corporate Finance, lending his strategic genius to a roster of prominent UK public firms. Exiting the CBI in 2006, he didn't slow down. Instead, he took the reins as Chairman and chief advisor to the Deloitte Industries Group's CEO. His departure from ministerial duty in 2008 opened another chapter as he embraced the mantle of Business Ambassador for UK Trade and Investment.
