"From my Gran's kitchen to the supermarket shelves and beyond"

In detail

SuperJam has been entered into the National Museum of Scotland as an 'Iconic Scottish Brand', has won over 20 innovation awards and launched in seven countries around the world. Fraser believes in giving something back through his success and his 'SuperJam' tea parties are a shining example of using corporate social responsibility to mutually benefit both the community and his company. Fraser co-founded Beer52.com, now the world's largest craft beer club, shipping millions of bottles of beer to its 150,000 customer's doors. In his book, '48-Hour Startup', Fraser uses his experience building a multi-million selling company to attempt an experiment; starting with a blank piece of paper, he sets out to build a completely new business in two days.
