Director of Public Affairs, Bitcoin Foundation

CSA Celebrity Speakers Ltd

Jinyoung Lee Englund is Director of Public Affairs at the Bitcoin Foundation. Being the youngest member on the Senior Management team, she serves as spokeswoman and leads the global strategic communications, education and marketing efforts for the foundation. She also served on the Romney-Ryan Presidential Transition Team during the 2012 Presidential election.

"An emerging voice on women in technology"

In detail

Jinyoung received her BA in Comparative History of Ideas from the University of Washington and is a recipient of the U.S. Department of State's Benjamin A. Gilman International Scholarship. Before joining the Bitcoin Foundation, Jinyoung served at a tech start-up, public policy and politics, directing day-to-day operations. Before entering public service she served with an international development non-profit organisation that builds schools, provides medical services and jobs training in Mozambique.

What she offers you

In her presentations Jinyoung speaks about her life and how technology has opened doors for her. She shares her passion for empowering women and the poor and her pursuit of the best practices and policies to do so. She explains to audiences how to recognise valuable business opportunities across the private, public and non-profit sectors.

How she presents

Jinyoung gives fresh insights in the world of technology. She is in great demand to speak at conferences around the globe.

Languages
