"A scholar, a gentleman and a brilliant stand-up, catch him before real fame comes knocking" Evening Standard

In detail

He has made a number of television and radio appearances, including The Insiders Guide To Sitcoms and the BBC Three pilot Street Sharks. He has appeared regularly at the Edinburgh Fringe, winning the Spirit of the Fringe award. In 2002 he won the Daily Telegraph Open Mic award and took second prize in So You Think You're Funny. In 2005 he was a Perrier Best Newcomer Nominee. In 2006 he appeared on the BBC2 comedy show Time Trumpet and developed a pilot called Overtime for BBC Radio 4.

What he offers you

One of Britain's most talked about and respected comedians, Mark entertains audiences with his sublime talent and glorious wit. Although his observations are sometimes based on the obvious, he has a skilful knack of exaggerating them until they become his own. The Times describes him as standing out rather in the way you imagine John Cleese or Peter Cook must have done in their day.

How he presents

Truly hilarious and highly entertaining, left-handed, yet wonderfully likeable, Mark Watson is in great demand at events throughout the country for his quick witted, fresh and breathlessly delivered stream of consciousness performed with torrential energy.
