London 2012 Gold Boxing Medallist

CSA Celebrity Speakers Ltd

Nicola Adams MBE is an English boxer who made history at the London 2012 Olympic Games by becoming the first female to win an Olympic boxing medal, claiming the Flyweight 51kg category title. In 2014 she added another gold medal by becoming the first woman to win a Commonwealth boxing gold medal. A pioneer throughout all aspects of her life, she has been one of the biggest success stories from the games. Nicola is now focused on defending her Olympic title in Rio in 2016.

Britain's winner of the first ever Olympic & Commonwealth Women's Boxing titles

In detail

Boxing since the age of 12, she appeared in her first bout at 13, but a lack of opponents and the developing nature of the sport meant she had to wait four years for her second fight. After that, she quickly became English champion, defending her title on three occasions. She went on to win silver at both European and World championships. Later, she became the inaugural British champion and finally won gold in the European competition. In July 2011 the BBC included Adams in a feature on 6 Promising Britons to watch in the Olympics.
