

Steve Nallon
Leading Impressionist

CSA Celebrity Speakers Ltd

Steve Nallon is recognised as being one of Britain's leading impressionists and spent over twelve years working on the award winning series Spitting Image. As well as sounding like the famous, Steve also has the uncanny ability to actually look like a wide range of personalities from Dame Edna Everage and David Bellamy to Patricia Routledge and Adrian Edmondson. As an after dinner speaker, Steve himself takes his audience on a comic tour through The World of the Impressionist and his vast range of voices ensures that audiences hear from a dazzling variety of familiar names. His after dinner presentation is both unique and highly entertaining, perfectly suited to a mixed audience. He is also an accomplished writer whose work ranges from television sketches to plays and magazine articles. At conferences and corporate events he often works with the Spitting Image team and is available to appear as a variety of characters including his renowned impression of Baroness Thatcher.
