

Andreas Ekström

Futurist and Commentator on the Digital Revolution

"One of the most sought-after futurists"

As a senior writer at Sweden's Sydsvenskan, Andreas has spent more than three decades examining the intersection of technology, society, culture and human behaviour. His bestselling book The Google Code established him as a leading commentator on the growing influence of digital platforms, while his work has since expanded to examine the wider social and commercial consequences of digitalisation. Andreas has delivered more than 1,000 lectures, seminars and author events in over 30 countries and was named Sweden's Speaker of the Year in 2019. His TED presentation on the moral bias behind search results reached an international audience of almost two million people and has been translated into more than 30 languages.

WHAT HE OFFERS YOU:

Andreas Ekström gives audiences a human perspective on digital transformation, AI and the future. Rather than simply explaining what new technology can do, this Speaker examines what it means for people, organisations and society.

HOW HE PRESENTS:

Andreas is a captivating and energetic storyteller who combines sharp journalism, humour, provocative questions and accessible analysis. His presentations are intellectually stimulating without becoming overly technical, encouraging audiences to reconsider familiar ideas and leave with a fresh perspective on the digital world.
