

Bronwen Maddox

Director & CEO of Chatham House

"An authority on the interaction between global political trends, finance and business"

Bronwen Maddox is the Director and Chief Executive of Chatham House and former Director of the Institute for Government, the leading think tank working to improve government, in making better decisions and implementing them. Previously Bronwen was Editor and Chief Executive of Prospect Magazine, the UK's leading current affairs and culture monthly title.

TOPICS:

- The UK & Global Economy
- Geopolitical Outlook
- Global Threats and Trends
- Future of Democracy
- Brexit

LANGUAGES:

She presents in English.

PUBLICATIONS:

2008 In Defence of America

IN DETAIL:

Bronwen started out as an investment analyst in the City and on Wall Street, and a Director of Kleinwort Benson Securities, where she ran its highly-rated team analysing world media stocks. She moved into journalism to head up the Financial Times investigation into Maxwell, before joining The Times as Washington Bureau Chief, US Editor, and finally Foreign Editor. She remains a regular newspaper contributor. With access to key figures across business, politics and leadership, Bronwen has built a reputation for informed, original insights. She has interviewed almost everyone from Henry Kissinger to Vladimir Putin.

WHAT SHE OFFERS YOU:

Bronwen's distinguished career in journalism, combined with her background in the City has made her an authority on the interaction between global political trends, finance and business.

HOW SHE PRESENTS:

Bronwen is an accomplished public speaker and chair of debates, for many kinds of audiences, including financial and military, and for many kinds of events, from after-dinner talks to seminars.