IN DETAIL:

In 2009, Dame Ellen MacArthur became aware of the limited availability of resources that our linear economy heavily depends on, she made the decision to leave her professional sailing career behind, after embarking on a four-year journey around the globe studying issues confronting our current global economy. She subsequently founded the Ellen MacArthur Foundation. The Foundation works with education and business to accelerate the transition to a regenerative circular economy. She acted as Vice-Chair of the World Economic Forum's Global Agenda Meta-Council on the circular economy and sat on the European Commission's Resource Efficiency Platform between 2012 and 2014. She received the French Legion of Honour from Nicolas Sarkozy in 2008. Ellen is a Patron of the Big Bang Fair – the largest celebration of science, technology, engineering and maths for young people in the UK.
