IN DETAIL:

Previously ITV News' Economics Editor, Noreena has delivered keynote speeches at TED, the World Economic Forum, and Google Zeitgeist, sharing platforms with leaders such as President Bill Clinton, Reid Hoffman, and Eric Schmidt. Her ideas inspired Bono's (RED) campaign, which has raised hundreds of millions for the fight against HIV/AIDS. Her current research on AI explores how it will reshape the workplace, how it is influencing human thought and decision-making, and the broader consequences for economies, politics, and society. She recently spoke on AI and the Future of Work at the prestigious Google/Stanford AI Imagination in Action Conference alongside global tech leaders.

WHAT SHE OFFERS YOU:

Her expertise spans global economics, geopolitics, technology, and generational change, now complemented by cutting-edge insights into artificial intelligence. She translates complex trends into practical strategies that help leaders anticipate disruption, make better decisions, and create lasting impact.

HOW SHE PRESENTS:

Noreena's inspirational talks leave the audience with a clearer vision for the future, arming them with better strategies that can prepare an organisation for the future.
