

Viviane Reding

Former Vice-President of the European Commission

"One of Europe's leading decision makers"

Viviane Reding is one of Europe's most influential political leaders and architects of modern European policy. A former Vice-President of the European Commission and European Commissioner for Justice, Information Society, Telecommunications, Education and Culture, she spent more than twenty-five years shaping European legislation and the digital transformation of the European Union.

TOPICS:

- The Future of Europe
- European Competitiveness
- Artificial Intelligence & AI Governance
- Digital Transformation
- European Regulation & Compliance
- Geopolitics and Global Trade
- Cybersecurity & Data Protection
- The Digital Economy
- Women in Leadership

LANGUAGES:

She presents in English, French, German and Luxembourgish.

PUBLICATIONS:

She published many articles, mainly on the reform of European Institutions, on the development of the EU into a Federal Political Union as well as on economic and financial governance.

IN DETAIL:

Viviane Reding served as European Commissioner from 1999 to 2014, holding several of the Commission's most influential portfolios, while also serving as Vice-President of the European Commission under José Manuel Barroso. During her tenure she played a pivotal role in liberalising Europe's telecommunications market, strengthening data protection and privacy legislation, advancing consumer rights, promoting gender equality, and laying many of the foundations for today's Digital Single Market.

WHAT SHE OFFERS YOU:

Viviane Reding helps organisations understand how European policymaking shapes global business, technology and society. Drawing on decades at the heart of European decision-making, she provides strategic insights into managing regulatory change, building resilient organisations and preparing for the future of international business.

HOW SHE PRESENTS:

Viviane delivers thoughtful, authoritative and engaging presentations. Her speaking style is clear, intelligent and accessible, bringing complex European legislation and geopolitical developments to life through real-world experience from the highest levels of international leadership.

© 2026 Celebrity Speakers Ltd