IN DETAIL:

In the 2003 World Cup, Will was one of England's most consistent performers, scoring 5 tries along the way. Following his retirement in 2006, Will quickly built up a thriving career as a media personality with a seamless transition from World Cup winner to analyst and pundit. Throughout his 13 seasons at the top, Will was a dedicated professional combining a fantastic work ethic with a desire to continuously learn and improve his game. Despite significant injury setbacks and occasional moments of self-doubt and personal tragedy his focus, determination and perseverance led him to the top of the national and international game. Off pitch his focus has remained undimmed. With a reputation as a bright, articulate, and entertaining personality he has established himself as a hugely popular and respected presenter for Sky Sports.

WHAT HE OFFERS YOU:

His experiences both in the city and on the pitch have enabled audiences to get a fantastic insight to the synergy between top level sport and top-level business. In his presentations Will inspires audiences to achieve their objectives in a light-hearted and memorable way.

HOW HE PRESENTS:

Will's outstanding achievements both on and off the field have made him an ideal speaker choice for a wide range of corporate clients. His intelligence and easy delivery style mixed in with a generous helping of humour make him a sure fire hit as a keynote, host or after dinner speaker.
